THE UNIVERSITY grew out of a demand of the people that higher education be available to more than a favored few. In 1862 Abraham Lincoln signed the "Land Grant College Act" providing for establishment of such colleges.

Illinois opened Mar.2, 1868, with three faculty members and 50 students in a second-hand building. To the original campus at Urbana-Champaign was added in 1896 the first of the Chicago Professional Units in the health sciences. Undergraduate Divisions were established in 1946 at Chicago and Galesburg, with that at Galesburg closing in 1949 when need for it had passed.

However, much as the University has grown in size, it has grown more in concept and activities. The kind of university it is today was unknown in 1868. The three-fold pattern of education, research, and service is a new and American contribution to the idea of a university. Today Illinois offers training in almost every field of human interest and activity; its great laboratories and scholars constantly extend the bounds of human knowledge; through publications, radio, extension and service activities it takes information to the people. And from the laboratories and other activities, vitalizing information and inspiration flow back to the classes.

The University is internationally known. Traceable returns from its research repay every year to the people of Illinois more than the cost of building and operating the University since it opened in 1868. For some of the things in which it has been first, see the next page; in others it has been a moving force, and in many more far ahead of the procession.

LEADERSHIP in education, research, public service, and student life and welfare has been characteristic of the University of Illinois since it opened. It has been first to do many things; in many others it has pioneered; in many it has led the world.

In education, Illinois showed leadership starting with the very first year of operation, 1868, when it offered architectural instruction which four years later allowed presentation by it of a diploma to America's first architectural graduate, Clifford Ricker, later for many years a distinguished member of its faculty.

The next year, 1869, Illinois introduced to America the idea of a laboratory for students. In this pioneering botany laboratory students saw and found out for themselves, instead of depending on textbook and lecture alone. In 1870 this idea was applied in another field when the University established the country's first shop for engineering education--not to train mechanics, but to let engineering students learn by doing.

In 1877 Prof. T. J. Burrill introduced at Illinois the world's first general bacteriology course; 1890 saw at Illinois the world's first course for architectural engineers; and 1897 brought the University the first state-supported School of Music in the United States.

In 1907 came the first legislative grant specifically for graduate study ever made by any state. Also after the turn of the century came the first college-level courses in business English in 1902; the first professor of city planning, C. M. Robinson, in 1912; the first four-year athletic coaching courses in 1919, and many others. To continue the list, to add those things which while Illinois did not do first it did early and well, would be monotonous as well as voluminous.

In student welfare and activities, Illinois also has been in front. In 1901 when Thomas Arkle Clark was named dean of men he was the world's first to bear this title. Today the office of Dean of Students is concerned in many aspects of student life outside the classroom. The interest has expanded through the years.

In 1948, Illinois pioneered in another great area by establishing the first comprehensive college program for the severely disabled. This program enables the handicapped to carry on lives as near normal as possible and become useful citizens, and is being adopted elsewhere.

Records show that Illinois had the first indoor intercollegiate relay carnival in 1917; and that in 1902 R. C. Matthews was the country's first collegiate cheer leader.

Three great campus-wide observances which have been adopted by many other institutions originated at Illinois. These are Homecoming, of which the world's first was at Illinois in 1910; collegiate Dads Day, originated at Illinois in 1920; and collegiate Mothers Day, first observed on the Illinois campus in 1921.

Though this is not of the University, Illinois is proud of the development at its campus of the student church and student church foundation movements. The world's first church expressly for college students, now McKinley Presbyterian Church, was established in 1906. The world's first campus church foundation, Wesley Foundation, was established by the Methodist Church at Illinois in 1913.

In research, the whole world knows of the Morrow Plots on the University of Illinois campus at Urbana-Champaign. These have been in continuous cultivation since 1876. Today they are the oldest soil experiment plots in America and second oldest in the world. They are the oldest corn plots in the world. Their lessons of how to preserve and to restore soil fertility are of incalculable value.

In 1881 Prof. T. J. Burrill--the same who in 1877 pioneered in bacteriology teaching--gave the world the first evidence that bacteria cause disease. He found this true in plants before Pasteur and Koch found that bacteria cause disease of animals and humans. He founded the science of bacterial plant pathology. Also of great importance to health was the statewide study of water-borne epidemics made by the University in 1896--the first such study of its kind.

While the University's Agricultural Experiment Station when established in 1888 was not the first, Illinois pioneered when in 1903 it extended this idea to another field by establishing the nation's first Engineering Experiment Station. In 1908 it opened another area by making Miss Nellie E. Goldthwaite the country's first full-time research worker in home economics.

In 1913 Prof. Jakob Kunz at Illinois made the first modern sensitive photoelectric cell. This was used in 1922 by Prof. J. T. Tykociner, research professor of electrical engineering at Illinois, when he devised and first demonstrated to the world modern sound-on-film motion pictures.

In 1924 the world's first house specially for home heating research was built at the campus. This provided a new type of laboratory for a research field in which Illinois pioneered and has led the world.

In 1940 Prof. D. W. Kerst invented the betatron--an "atom-smasher" for physics research and source of high-energy x-rays for medicine and industry. The first betatron entirely for medical use was installed in 1949 on the University's medical campus. The world's largest betatron--of 340-million volts energy--was put into operation in 1950 at Urbana-Champaign.

In the field of health sciences, one of many far-reaching accomplishments was the development in 1948 at the College of Dentistry of the first formula for ammoniated dentifrice.

As with teaching, so with research the list could go on and on--from soil to crops, railways and highways to aviation, veterinary medicine to medicine for humans, heating, mining, business, psychology, archeology, the social sciences--on and on.

In public service, the University of Illinois always has been, as their own institution, turned to by the people of the state. Organized meetings started fairly early. Of special interest today is the holding in 1914 of the world's first short course in highway engineering. In 1925 Illinois had the first short course for firemen. Conferences and short courses now dot the calendar--and state.

Extension services in agriculture and home economics had long aided citizens of this and many other states, when in 1948 Illinois pioneered again by extending this idea to a new area by establishing the world's first Bureau of Business Management.

ENROLLMENT figures of the first semester show the greatest number of students on the campus at one time; second semester enrollment is slightly less.

ADMISSION to the University is open to graduates of accredited high schools who meet entrance requirements and others who pass entrance tests. Admissions and Records are under Charles W. Sanford, dean of admissions.

CLASS SIZE is given serious consideration. Hundreds of students receive individual instruction in music, thesis courses, and the like. Courses involving large lectures have the same students meet in small discussion sections.

In 1957-58, 5,100 classes--4,659 undergraduate and 441 graduate--met at Urbana-Champaign, and 994 at the Chicago Undergraduate Division. Class size is indicated in the following table. Percentages vary little from year to year.

APPROPRIATIONS to the University are made by the state General Assembly on a biennial (two-year) basis. The principal support comes from state tax revenues. For the July 1, 1957 to June 30, 1959, biennium, this is $91,457,000. Also appropriated is $12,000,000 from student fees and other income, by law deposited in the state treasury. This makes the total biennial appropriation for educational and general purposes $103,457,000. STUDENT HELP of many kinds is offered. The University has at Urbana-Champaign probably more full-time students--away from home and in the University environment 24 hours a day--than any other institution. It recognizes responsibility for favorable conditions and help in all problems. The Health Service, Student Counselling Bureau, deans of various colleges and schools, church foundations (page 23), and the dean of students and his staff all are ready to help students at any time. Illinois was the first institution to have a full-time dean of men to concern himself with student well being outside the classroom. Today his post is that of the Dean of Students under whom are the Dean of Men, Dean of Women, Student Employment Bureau (page 23), Division of Housing, and various boards of control for extra-curricular activities. Dean of Students is Fred H. Turner; Dean of Men, Edward E. Stafford, Dean of Women, Miss Miriam A. Shelden.

STUDENT COUNSELLING BUREAU is available to both students and those persons considering college. It offers free scientific vocational and educational aptitude tests and counselling service. Gilbert.

UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICE treats students for ambulatory conditions and refers those needing more extensive care to physicians, gives emergency treatment, gives physical examinations to all new students and staff members, and operates McKinley Hospital of 175 beds. All students have hospital and medical insurance as part of required fees. In 1957-58, 58,461 calls were made to the Health Center at Urbana-Champaign. Similar services are at the professional and undergraduate division campuses in Chicago. Director is Dr. Orville S. Walters.

The first church expressly for college students was at Illinois in 1906, and the church foundation idea started at Urbana in 1913. Now there are 15 religious foundations, churches, and religious groups giving special attention to students, and students are welcomed also at all churches in the community. The YMCA and YWCA each have large buildings adjacent to the campus and are respectively the oldest active student organizations for men and for women.
