THE UNIVERSITY STUDIES

The Graduate School of the University of Illinois was first formally organized under that name in 1892, though facilities for research had existed for many years before. In 1900 it was found necessary to provide some regular medium of publication for the growing number of articles and monographs produced by graduate students and faculty, and a general series was established, known as the "University Studies." Up to 1913, four volumes were published, containing twenty-seven numbers, and representing various departments and interests of the Graduate School.

In 1910 a second series was started, known as the University of Illinois Studies in the Social Sciences, designed to afford a means of publishing monographs prepared by graduate students or members of the faculty in the departments of history, economics, political science, and sociology. Each volume consists of about 600 printed pages annually. The subscription price is three dollars a year.

The Illinois Biological Monographs is a serial published quarterly by the University of Illinois. This publication presents in monographic form research contributions of especial merit and of somewhat extended character. Each volume includes about 500 pages and 20 or more full page plates. The series may be obtained under a subscription price of three dollars yearly. Individual numbers will be sold separately at prices determined by the size and amount of illustration contained.

The Studies in Language and Literature include monographs in general linguistic and comparative literature; the classical languages and Sanskrit; the Romance languages; English, the Scandinavian, and other Germanic languages; and Celtic. The title of the series is so construed as to admit the publication of such researches in the history of culture as may throw light on the processes of language and the interpretation of literature. It is a serial published quarterly, for which the annual subscription price is three dollars.

The following is a list of the numbers published or in press in each of the three newer series:
